

Authors

Iolanda Zollo is a PhD student in Didactic corporealities, technology and inclusion at the Department of Humanities, Philosophy and Education at the University of Salerno, Italy. Her research interests focus on simplex didactics in teacher education.

Elias E. Kourkoutas is Associate Professor of Psychology and Special Education at the University of Crete, Greece. His research and teaching focuses on Inclusion and school-based interventions for children with special educational difficulties, emotional-behavioral problems, psychosocial, developmental disorders, interventions in families with exceptional children, ecosystemic approaches in childhood psychopathology and school inclusive practices.

Maurizio Sibilio is Full Professor of Didactics and Special Pedagogy at the Department of Humanities, Philosophy and Education at the University of Salerno, Italy. His research interests have principally concentrated on the themes of didactic corporealities and, in recent years, his works have focused on simplicity and vicariance in educational practice.

Laura Formenti is Professor of General and Social Pedagogy at the Department of Human Sciences for Education, Università degli Studi di Milano-Bicocca. She coordinates the Ph.D in Education and Communication and the Education Area of the University Services for Orientation. She is President of ESREA - European Society for Education on the Education of Adults and joint Convenor of the Life History and Biography Network. Her research is about adult life as a space for formal and informal learning, transformation and generative relationships, using qualitative experience-based, aesthetical and cooperative methods of inquiry.

Eva Cendon is Director of the Centre for Continuing Education Research and Educational Management at the Berlin University for Professional Studies and Study Director of the Professional Master Program "Competence and Education Management". Her research and teaching focuses on reflective learning and reflective practice within the lifelong learning sector at universities.

Agnes Turner is Assistant Professor of Education and Deputy Head of the Institute of Instructional and School Development at the University of Klagenfurt (Austria). She is in the scientific board of various postgraduate Master programmes in the educational work field. Her areas of research are counselling in education, psychoanalytic observational studies, reflective practice and professionalism within the educational field.

Serafina Pastore Ph.D. on Instructional Design and Educational Assessment, is a researcher on Didactics in the Department of Education, Psychology, Communication, University of Bari-Italy. She also serves as the coordinator of Italian Evaluation Society's Special Interest Group on Educational Assessment. Her research interests include the study of self-assessment supporting learning in higher education and assessment of competencies and learning outcomes.

Loretta Fabbri is Full Professor of Didactics and Organizational Research Methodology at the University of Siena. She is Director of Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication of Arezzo. She is delegated of the Dean for the Lifelong Learning Activities. Her research field focuses on issues related to participative learning methods and knowledge building in professional communities of practices.

Claudio Melacarne, PhD is Associate Professor in Social Pedagogy at the University of Siena, Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication of Arezzo. Delegate of the Dean to Continuing Education. His research activities have always been focused on subject matters related to communities of practice and transformative learning processes. In particular, the study of professional and organizational development with a special attention to learning processes and knowledge building within communities of practice.

Valerio Ferro Allodola, PhD in Education, is Research Fellow in Didactic and Special Education at the University of Siena, Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication of Arezzo. He worked at the University of Florence, at the National Institute of Health in Rome and at University "Erasmus" in Rotterdam, Department of Psychology (Netherlands) in the field of Medical Education. His research interests is actually focused on the conditions to promote reflective and transformative learning in formal and informal contexts.

Diana Carmela Di Gennaro is a PhD student in Educational Research Methodology at the Department of Humanities, Philosophy and Education at the University of Salerno, Italy. Her research interests focus on the study of teaching strategies and tools which promote the learning process of students with Special Educational Needs in educational contexts.

Erika Marie Pace is a PhD student in Didactic corporealities, technology and inclusion at the Department of Humanities, Philosophy and Education at the University of Salerno, Italy. Her research interests focus on teacher education, lifelong learning and the study of inclusive teaching strategies and tools.

Ilidkó Koós is Vice-Dean for Education Affairs at the University of West Hungary, Faculty of Berzsenyi Dániel Teacher Training College, Hungary and Senior Reader at the same university within the Department of Pedagogy and Psychology and the Department for the Training of Lower Primary School Teachers. Her research interests focus on language acquisition development in the first years, communication, sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics, primary and secondary education, prevention of dyslexia and dysgraphia.

Paola Aiello is Associate Professor at the Department of Humanities, Philosophy and Education at the University of Salerno, Italy. Her scientific theoretical and empirical research is mainly based on the relation between body and cognition in the teaching–learning process and on teacher education for the promotion of inclusive educational practices.

Saverio Fontani is teacher at the University of Florence. His interests of research focus on Special Education for the Autism Spectrum Disorders, Genetics Syndromes and other developmental disabilities. Recent publications: La Sindrome di Williams. Dalla ricerca all'intervento psicoeducativo (Bergamo: Junior, 2012); I Disturbi dello Spettro autistico. Percorsi per la didattica inclusiva (Pisa: ETS, 2014).