

Authors

Valérie Amiraux, Ph.D., is Vice-President – Community and International Partnerships of the Université de Montréal. Trained in History, classical Arabic and Political Science, she is a Full Professor of Sociology at the Université de Montréal (on leave from her Senior Research Fellow position at the CNRS), where she directed the Canada Research Chair for the Study of Religious Pluralism for ten years (2007-2017). Her main fields are religious pluralism, discrimination, race and ethnicity, Islamophobia and radicalization, working on various member states of the European Union and more recently on the situation in Québec (Canada). Her current works centre on an ethnographic analysis of the articulation between pluralism and radicalisation, with a special emphasis on the interaction between majority societies and Jews and Muslims as minorities in specific European and Canadian cities.

Loretta Fabbri, Ph.D, is Full professor of Didactics and Transformative Methodologies at University of Siena. She is Vice Head of the Department of Education, Human Sciences and Intercultural Communication, (University of Siena) and she is delegate of the Rector for the soft-skills programs within the Teaching & Learning Center. Her research is focused on Theory and Methods of Transformative Learning, Community of Practices and post-qualitative research. She is co-founder of Italian Transformative Learning Network and works with private and public institutions for continuing education programs.

Claudio Melacarne, Ph.D., is Associate Professor of Social Pedagogy at the Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication (University of Siena). He is interested in studying professional development processes in organizations using educational and training research methodologies. He is Co-director of the international journal Educational Reflective Practices. He works as a consultant in public and private

Educational Reflective Practices (ISSN 2240-7758, ISSNe 2279-9605), 1/2020

DOI: 10.3280/ERP2020-001009

Copyright © FrancoAngeli

N.B: Copia ad uso personale. È vietata la riproduzione (totale o parziale) dell'opera con qualsiasi mezzo effettuata e la sua messa a disposizione di terzi, sia in forma gratuita sia a pagamento.

companies. He currently teaches Foundation of Social Pedagogy and Methodologies of Educational Research and Training.

Diana Miconi is a licensed psychologist and post-doctoral scholar in the Division of Social and Cultural Psychiatry at McGill University, Montréal, Canada. She holds a Ph.D. in developmental psychology from the University of Padova, Italy, and was awarded the 2017 Best Doctoral Thesis Award by the Italian Association of Psychologists. Her current research focuses on risk and resilience processes underlying the development of positive attitudes towards violent radicalization in youth.

Cécile Rousseau, MD is a child psychiatrist and professor of the Division of Social and Cultural Psychiatry at McGill University (Montréal, Canada). She has worked extensively with immigrants and refugees communities, developing specific school-based interventions and leading policy oriented research. Presently her research focuses on intervention and prevention programs to address violent radicalization.

Carlo Orefice is Associate Professor in General and Social Pedagogy at the Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication (University of Siena). Ph.D. in Anthropological Sciences, his current research and teaching activities are focused on Adult Education and Pedagogy of care, with special emphasis on anthropologies of the body and experiences of illness.

He has published numerous works, including: Lo studio della cura educativa in un'ottica complessa (PensaMultimedia 2020); Good Health, Quality Education, Sustainable Communities, Human Rights. The scientific contribution of Italian UNESCO Chairs and partners to SDGs 2030 (con J-E. Baños, F. Bianchi, S. Costantini; FUP 2019); The role of humanities in the teaching of medical students (con J-E. Baños; Esteve 2018).

Maria Lucenti is a Ph.D. in Social Sciences, specific field of the degree course: migrations studies and intercultural process at University of Genoa and University of Carthage. She is Adjunct Professor in Children's literature at the University of Genoa and she is currently involved in a DAAD PRIME – Postdoctoral Researchers International Mobility Experience – at the University of Hamburg. She deals with the history of education and the comparative analysis of educational policies, school programs and textbooks and the relationship between identity and education, starting from the variables of gender and cultural diversity.

Sivane Hirsch is an associate Professor at the Department of Education at the University of Québec at Trois-Rivières (UQTR). She holds a Ph.D. in sociology and education and focuses her research and writings on the challenges of taking into account cultural and religious diversity in the educational system. Her recent studies analyze teachers' approach to the treatment of acute political subjects in their classroom and challenges while dealing with plural experiences in history teachings, the impact of schools' "intercultural climate" on immigrant students' success and the documentation of the implementation of homeschooling support center within an orthodox community. She authored the books Judaïsme et Éducation: Enjeux et Défis Pédagogiques (2016), Des approches novatrices pour enseigner des objets complexes en interdisciplinarité (2020) and Impasses et avenir du cours éthique et culture religieuse. Québec (2020), as well as numerous articles and book chapters on these questions, she is teaching in teachers' training program on the Quebec's Ethics and religious culture program and in the postgraduate program on ethical and political issues in education.

Francesca Bianchi is Associate professor in Sociology at the Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication (University of Siena). She has taken part in several studies and researches concerning social and cultural transformations, continuing vocational training and guidance (with ISFOL Rome, Carlo Cattaneo Institute of Bologna, MTI of Boston). She has been involved, as Italian expert in social and education fields, in the European network COST 13 Working group n. 4 "Youth employment/unemployment", Action Changing labour market, welfare policies and citizenship. In recent years she has been particularly studying the social interaction and the new forms of sociality and participation in everyday life, taking part to several international conferences organized by ESPAnet, European Network for Housing Research. In 2015 she was visiting researcher in Tours, "Cités, TERritoires, Environnement et Sociétés" Unité de Recherche CITERES, François Rabelais University, Tours and in 2018 visiting professor in Paris Nanterre, Centre de Recherche sur l'Habitat (CRH), Laboratoire LAVUE. She published several books and articles on national and international reviews.

Nicolina Bosco, Ph.D. in Educational Sciences, is a Researcher in Didactics and Special Pedagogy at the Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication (University of Siena). Her research interests focus on multiculturalism and radicalization in life and school contexts, inclusion and social marginalisation.

She presented her research in national and international journals and in several conferences in Italy and abroad. She carried out study and research experiences at the Université Diderot Paris 7 (Paris, France) and at the Georgetown University (Washington, D. C., USA) where she improved her competences on research methodology. She is currently involved in an inter-university multidisciplinary research project entitled “F.O.R.w.A.R.D. Training, Research, and Development of “community based” strategies to prevent radicalization and support integration”.

Mario Giampaolo, Ph.D. is Assistant Professor in the Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication (University of Siena). His research focuses are related to adult education, competence based education and informal learning technologies. He works as researcher in many European Erasmus Projects and he is member of Italian society of Education. He is the author of essays and articles, among which the most significant is: How to personalize learning (Pensa Multimedia).

Debbie Kramlich is a visiting Postdoctoral Research Associate at Payap University as well as an English teacher at the Christliche Deutsche Schule both in Chiang Mai, Thailand. Dr. Kramlich is interested in using cultural humility and cultural safety to reframe pedagogy for the particular needs of the multicultural classroom. Her research interests include: transformative learning, multiculturalism, interculturalism, and design research.

Alessandra Romano is a Senior Researcher in the Department of Education, Humanities and Intercultural Communication (University of Siena). In both teaching and research, Dr. Romano’s focus is in generating conditions for adults, groups and teams to learn, grow and develop the skillful means for collaborative inquiry and organizational change. Her particular strands of research are diversity and disability management, and experience-based methods, such as art-based and performative methodologies.